The 237th meeting took place at Knole Park Golf Club, a very individual golf course set in an ancient deer park. It was founded in 1911 and designed by J F Abercrombie who was also responsible for West Kent GC, The Addington GC and Coombe Hill GC as well as many others around the world.

It is a very attractive course with herds of deer all around. It is also a very quiet course with no roads close by and only an occasional Gatwick flight to be heard.

The fairways are mostly generous but at this time of year the ferns grow thick and tall and, as a 'second cut' of rough, this dark green ground cover is worse than heather for hiding golf balls.

The greens were in good condition but fairly slow.

The clubhouse is the original building with some sympathetic additions. It has a very comfortable atmosphere.

The weather was dry all day, cloudy and humid at first but during the afternoon it became cooler and the sun broke through as we had our pre-dinner drinks sitting on the patio with a large group of deer grazing close to the first tee and putting green just outside the clubhouse.

Our day ended with a meal in the dining room looking out onto this same scene.
